The Alaska Mail

HONGKONG, FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1892.

It will be seen that the election program which we publish to-day is substantially the same as that which we produced from our Singapore exchange.

gapore, July 28.' The telegram which we published yesterday, giving the same information, was dated 'London, July 20.' From this it may be inferred result being that the news came in by steamer quicker than by telegraph. Finding fault with Renter's eccentricities and faculties has become a rather tiresome task. His subscribers have become accustomed to exhibiting of imbecile incompetence in the manner in which telegraphic news is supplied, and we are inclined to think that the natural feeling of dissatisfaction adequate return which he gives the

(and it seems to be the only possible inference) that Reuter's agent at Singapore took a week to make up his mind as to whether he should transmit the message.

for their money has been swallow up by a growing curiosity as to wh
they will do.

regular intervals indicating the progress of the elections, giving the numbers returned and the seats gained by each party. This, if it had been done with ordinary care and industry, might have been sufficient. But at a very early stage the publication had got so confused and contradictory that it generally misled rather than helped the electors upon them. This was not the experience of the Hongkong and Shanghai press, but of the Singapore, Shanghai and Yokohama papers. The Hongkong and Shanghai subscribers east of Singapore seem to have regarded the middlement with much the same spirit of resignation as the Japan paper which said—Quand les élections auront été terminées, les télégrammes forwarded through Reuters' agency from time to time with reference to the elections now going on in Great Britain. The only thing to do, under the

the circumstances, is to await further particulars by mail." They were content to wait till the mail brought them news of the elections; Rauter, having proved himself a delusion and a snare, The Singapore subscribers, however, protested, and the protest had a good effect as far as they were concerned. A better supply of telegrams was therefore sent as far as Singapore, but there it stopped. Between the 18th and the 28th of July no election news reached Hongkong, through Rauter's agency. For the news, that the Marquis of Salisbury had conferred with Her Majesty the Queen, a

Windsor, and that Sir Unifex Drake had been elected for the Forest of Dean, we were indebted to the Singapore papers. From the same source came our first news of what is practically the final result of the elections. Yet while these items of interest, like the figures showing the progress of the election, were being sent to the wireless sending-out here, a drawing telegraph about a highly improbable and equally uninteresting "suggestion" was evidently sent as a supplement to one that has not yet appeared. It would hardly be possible to give a more convincing proof of gross negligence and utter lack of management as regards the supply of telegrams to Reuters' subscribers in the Far East.

A TYPHOON AND AN EARTH-

THE MISSION TO MOROCCO.
London, 22nd July, 1892.

ment refused to sign the treaty presented by Sir C. Evan-Smith. The treaty was of a purely commercial nature, placing all nations on an equal footing. The Sultan thirty thousand pounds sterling to accept a fresh treaty, but Sir Euan-Smith broke off the parleying and quitted Fez. The French Press are exultant at the failure of the mission.

THOUGH communities and individuals in the Far East may differ politically on the and Tories, says the London and China Express, there is little doubt of unanimity when we come to the question of Unionists or Separatists, on the question of Ireland.

Scotemen in the East who up to 1888 were staunch Liberals, but it is tolerably safe to state now that all the way round, from Penang to Yokohama, the majority of Englishmen (by this we mean all nationalists) hope for the return of the present Government to power. A Government which has made itself so respected abroad, and has followed what may be termed the best of all possible policy, must commend itself to those who are in close touch with that Empire, and are free from the petty details of party strife at home. Great Britain's greatness depends on the maintenance of her Empire.
